

BSBWHS307 Apply knowledge of WHS laws in the workplace

1 day workshop - $350 per person (or study online)

This includes assessment work to be completed and submitted

You can complete this unit of competence either in a workshop (classroom style) or online.

This course involves the skills and knowledge required to understand work health and safety (WHS) laws, and comply with them in one's own workplace. It applies to those who contribute to compliance with WHS laws as part of their WHS responsibilities, which are in addition to their main duties.

Course Overview

- WHS legislative duties of self and others, including limits of own expertise
- organisational WHS policies, procedures, processes and systems for:
 - monitoring workplace compliance with WHS laws
 - identifying and reporting non-compliance with WHS laws
 - communicating WHS-related information
 - requirements of commonwealth and state/territory WHS laws, standards and guidance material, and publications relevant to own work role, workplace and industry
 - obligations and duties relating to consultation regarding training of workers, and health and safety representatives, including who must be consulted
 - consequences of non-compliance with WHS laws, related documentation and organisational WHS policies, procedures, processes and systems
 - individuals and duty holders to access for advice and accountability about WHS compliance
 - sources of information about compliance with legislation.

Certification

Students who are deemed competent will receive a Statement of Attendance recognised under the Australian Qualifications Framework. This certification is nationally recognised. The Statement is issued by Career Development and Training (RTO 45581).

Course Inclusions

- Training by experienced industry expert with years of real-world experience applying risk management principles in workplaces.
